

FEPTS INTERNATIONAL WEEK

NOVEMBER 2017

Universitat de Lleida

Psicologia i Treball Social

14-16 NOVEMBER 2017

Globalization is increasing day by day, and so are the implications that this concept involves. Nowadays, having the ability to deal with people from all over the world is a required and necessary skill in any future career.

In this context, studying abroad forces students to leave their comfort zone in order to explore and experience other cultures, languages, environment and education systems. This situation gives students the opportunity to embrace diversity and open their minds. By identifying and questioning stereotypes in relation to race, cultural background, nationality, among others, and by having to face new and unexpected situations in the host country, students have the opportunity to grow as a person and as citizens of our world.

In this International Week, we aim to share knowledge and ideas in order to understand why it is so essential.
